ISSUP Newsletter: Issue 13

¡Hola! We are excited to announce the launch of our website in Spanish, which you can access by clicking here. Our website provides an opportunity to share, discuss and learn about matters within the fields of substance use prevention and treatment, as well as other related areas. Besides Spanish, our website is also available in English and Portuguese.

The last decade has witnessed the appearance of an unprecedented amount of new drugs available on the global market. Click the link below to read about a recent study that reviews and analyses existing research into New Psychoactive Substances.

This edition also includes a new study that asks for the opinions of addiction experts, with a view to reaching a consensus on the necessary core skills that medical education ought to cover at undergraduate, postgraduate and continued medical education levels, respectively. Also featured are UNODC's evidence-based Guidelines on Drug Prevention and Treatment for Girls and Women. Among other things, the publication discusses the prevalence of alcohol and drug use, as well as related trends among girls and women worldwide.

As always, visit our website for more of the latest information from the fields of drug prevention and treatment and head over to our Forum to discuss relevant topics with our members. If there's anything else you'd like to read about in our newsletter or see on our website, please feel free to email us at info@issup.net.
