

ISSUP Newsletter: Issue 3

This week we caught up with Jeff Lee, ISSUP's Executive Director, to learn about his involvement with ISSUP and what he gets up to outside of work. This edition also includes a new resource on evidence-based and promising policies and practice in health education that was launched as part of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs (CND) meeting. We also share an article that sheds light upon the lack of training opportunities for medical students to learn about substance use disorders.

Check out our website for more of the latest information from the fields of drug prevention and treatment, including a news story that raises concerns over the growing need to address new psychoactive substances, alongside research that links drug use to lower academic performance among university students.
