This week's newsletter takes a look at a variety of issues, including the opioid crisis that has rocked the United States in recent years. A new study examines the federal response to the opioid epidemic and offers several options for tackling the problem. For a better understanding of how drugs affect the brain, check out the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA's) review of the effects of drugs on neurotransmission.

In this edition we also feature a webinar that highlights the importance of self-care for addiction professionals. The webinar aims to help you identify your personal challenges and needs to create an authentic self-care plan for yourself. Click on the link below to watch the webinar recording, access the power point slides and take the online quiz to receive continuing education credit in the US.
